

MORNING APPEAL.

Friday, March 25 1887

THE OLD EMPEROR'S BIRTH-DAY.

No people ever had a better right to be proud of a ruler than have the people of Germany, who, on the 22nd, turned the city of Berlin into a scene of unexampled festivity upon the occasion of the 90th anniversary of Emperor William's birthday.

There was no happier man in all Europe than this grand old ruler, who saw the Capital city of his Empire resounding with music, the air trembling with salutes, the skies reflecting the glare of lights, and the streets carpeted with flowers.

Around him were his children, his grandchildren and his great-grandchildren, loading "grandpa" with gifts and kisses, and shouting out the morning welcome.

Beyond the palace were his people all rejoicing in his happiness, and within a call a million armed men ready to defend his throne from the invader. He had just made an alliance with Austria and Italy, had ward off a threatened war, was 90 years old, and still as young and hearty as anybody; his mental faculties unimpaired, and his appetite good.

Taking all things into consideration, Emperor William, of Germany has about as much to be thankful for as any mortal that breathes the air of earth today. No other Emperor or Monarch has enjoyed such a splendid reign.

While the miserable Czar of Russia crouches like a frightened bound in his palace, looking upon his nearest friend as a Nihilist, William of Germany, is about shaking hands with his subjects and interesting himself in their welfare.

While the other rulers of Europe are wondering what change is at hand to unseat them from their thrones, William's mind is not bothered with any prognostications of future trouble, but is at peace with himself, his people and all the world.

If Kings must still exist, they should be men of such mould as William of Germany, who comes from an ancient line of people who inherit brains, brawn, long life, good nature and good hearts.

Think of a man who, with the cares of Empire on his mind; its affairs of State, its finances, its levies and ledgers, its wars and its progress, reaches the ripe old age of 90 with his faculties unimpaired. He came from good stock, took care of himself in his youth, steered clear of dissipation and vice, and never allowed anything to bother his mind after sundown.

Bill, old boy, here's to you.

A Washington doctor predicts that President Cleveland will die before the end of his term of office. The doctor says he eats too much, uses his brain too much and exercises too little. The chances are that the part referring to the brain may be ignored. Cleveland does not use his brain any more than any other professional or business man. What is the matter with our President, is, that he is too fat. If Cleveland should die many persons will present a verdict of "overwork," while in reality the cause will be overeating and physical laziness. Daily Report.

Jasper McDonald, the stock broker, is suing the S. F. Post for libel. He is having a lively spell with it. The Post lawyers got him on the cross examination grid-iron, and are having a choice lot of fun with him. After the developments in the case a jury ought to be tarred and feathered which gives him as much as one cent damages.

When Phil Armour, the great pork packer, was at the Palace in San Francisco recently, he was called upon by a delegation of Buckley's friends and asked if he had time to assist in the packing of a Democratic ward convention.

The Chinese are trying to get one of their wooden gods into the port of San Francisco free of duty. The Custom House officials have decided that manufactured gods must pay to get into San Francisco.

The Beecher monument is a failure, along with the Grant fiasco. The American people are very apathetic regarding the great dead.
